Foreword

As we look back at our school life we are aware that, like a jigsaw puzzle, it is made up of many small pieces, each important in itself, each also a significant part of a harmonious whole. In our yearbook we, the Class of 1959, have tried to portray each gaily colored segment and to fit it for you into its proper place in the completed picture.

We honor the teaching profession.

Few men exert more influence than does a teacher. It is he who, through his ability to excite the imagination of youth, molds the mind, character, and personality of the future citizen.

It is indeed fortunate that throughout the length and breadth of America there are today many hundreds of men and women who are devoting their efforts to fighting ignorance, to imparting knowledge in a clear, thorough, and systematic manner. It is to these individuals, who have themselves searched for truth and are working with consecrated effort to reveal it to others, that we dedicate this book.

Such teachers have the capacity to "train us up in the way we should go", to make us understand the beauty and mystery of life, and to inspire us to ever greater efforts toward our ideals. They are our models, showing us what our lives can be; supervisors, directing our efforts into constructive channels; and friends, acceptors of our confidences and problems.

Because of all that we owe to them this book is, at best, an inadequate tribute, but we, the Class of 1959, offer it with gratitude and sincerity.

Administration and Faculty

Every puzzle is held together by a framework of firmly connected pieces. Dr. Sturgis, school board member for twenty-five years, symbolizes those who provide a sturdy framework for our school.

They planned for our future . . .

The School Board, composed of fifteen members, is an elected body whose duties are to formulate educational policies, to exercise general supervision over regular and extra-curricular activities, and, through taxation, to provide the "Where-withal" for the operation of the schools.

Every fourth Thursday of the month the meeting is called to order in the new Collegeville-Trappe Elementary School. Standing committees on property, finance, teachers, and supplies do much of the work, but final action is taken by the entire Board. To these public-spirited citizens who serve without pay and give their time so freely to the service of the community, the Class of 1959 extends its sincere thanks.

educational policies . . .

Since the Perkiomen Joint School System is constantly growing, carrying out the policies established by the School Board in accordance with state regulations is an ever more time-consuming and exacting task for Mr. Krug, the Supervising Principal. His many and varied duties include purchasing equipment and supplies, interviewing prospective teachers, coordinating the work of three schools, and initiating plans to improve the educational program. Because of the opening of the new elementary building, this year was a particularly busy one for him.

Despite his many conferences, reports, telephone calls, and unscheduled interruptions, Mr. Krug has always found time to spend with his family, to enjoy his hobby, music, and to participate actively in the Rotary Club, the church, where he is a member of the choir, and many other community organizations.

ADA W. BARDSLEY

LOUIS A. KRUG

TO THE CLASS OF 1959:

Your future is now! Your studies in school prepared you for citizenship, employment, and physical, mental, and cultural activities. Now you practice them independent of school supervision. You can bring honor to yourself and your school by continuing to learn, accepting responsibility, doing honest work, maintaining a good reputation, and making your own contribution to human progress and welfare.

You will look at this fine book with pride as you apply the ideals and teachings of your school. The best wishes of Board, Faculty and Administration go with each of you for a good and Godly life.

Louis A. Krug
Supervising Principal

ADA W. BARDSLEY

Mrs. Bardsley's friendliness has been greatly missed at the High School since last fall when her office was moved to the new elementary building. There, as Mr. Krug's secretary, she makes out payrolls, School Board and County Office reports, and performs the many other tasks necessary to keep the office of the Supervising Principal functioning smoothly.

GOMER R. EDWARDS

TO THE CLASS OF 1959:

As long ago as several thousand years, the world had men who berated youth for their moral decline, for their decadence in general. Today too, these men exist.

In contrast, there are those today who champion youth and speak of their achievements, of their many fine qualities.

Those of us who have worked with you hold the latter view. May you, through the recognition of the dependence upon a Power greater than yourselves, continue to vindicate our belief in the moral stability, in the great potential of today's youth.

ISABEL E. GRATER

"When a pupil needs a friend", he applies to Mr. Edwards' secretary Mrs. Grater, the traditional information-dispenser, kleenex-provider, and excuse card-maker-outer for the High School. Constant interruptions do not keep her from running the principal's office with polished efficiency. She also assists the teachers in many ways, for example, by handling the ubiquitous requisition slips.

... and curriculum.

Mr. Edwards' major responsibility as principal is to insure that the entire school functions smoothly. Not only does he solve the many unexpected problems that arise each day, but he also assigns rooms for classes and study halls, an increasingly difficult task as the school grows, schedules all extra-curricular events so that no conflicts occur, and compiles the master schedule which coordinates the hour-by-hour program of every pupil and teacher. Through his initiative the National Honor Society has recently granted us a charter, and a chapter will be installed this year. Perhaps more important to the school, however, than his routine duties are his friendly counseling and guidance of students.

Mr. Edwards enjoys golf and is active in his church and in the Rotary Club.

Seniors

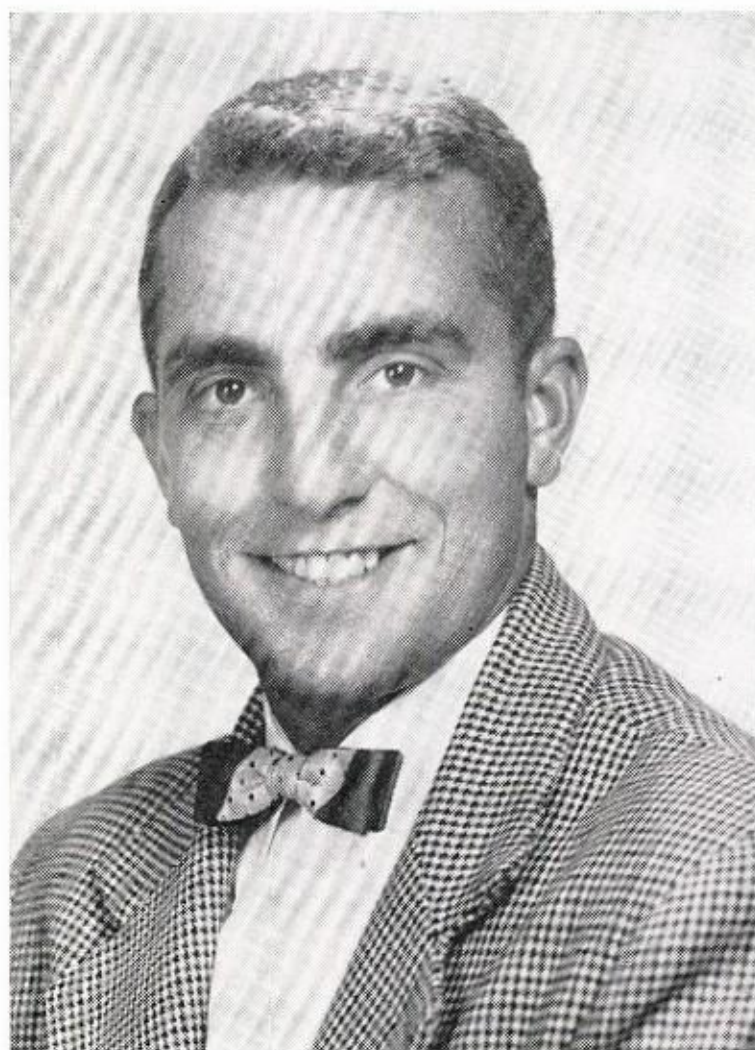

Next within the framework we place the key pieces of the puzzle, those representing the seniors. The leading part they play in forming the design is clear.

We appreciate . . .

For his guidance and efficient supervision we, the Class of 1959, extend to our advisor, Mr. Fretz, our sincere appreciation. When in September 1956, we first formally organized as a class he helped us orient ourselves in our new role as members of the Senior High School. During the ensuing three years he has always been ready to help us define our goals and chart a course to attain them.

The same qualities of patience, tact, and enthusiasm which made him an outstanding coach have also made him an invaluable class advisor. He has prodded us when we dallied, encouraged us when we were dismayed, and frequently recovered our fumbles to turn near-failure into success. Whatever our problems, his skill has helped solve them.

Mr. Fretz grew up in the neighboring town of Lansdale, attended Lansdale High School, and graduated from West Chester State Teachers' College in the department of Physical Education. In 1955 he came to

WILLIAM A. FRETZ

Collegeville-Trappe High School as instructor in Health and Physical Education and as head coach in football and baseball. His skill as a tactician and success as a morale builder are attested by the fact that in 1957 he produced the first undefeated-untied football team in the school's history, a team that scored 221 points while allowing their opponents only 39.

Hunting and fishing are Mr. Fretz's hobbies. He and his wife, Joyce, are also busy raising two future football stars, William, Jr. (age 5) and James (age 2).

Despite his busy schedule Mr. Fretz has always found time to help us with our class activities. To him we express our sincere thanks and best wishes for the future.

Billy sends a powerful punch towards Daddy's middle.

... your untiring efforts in class activities.

Leadership, responsibility, and integrity—these qualities were foremost in our thoughts when we chose those who would lead our class. At the beginning of our school year, we displayed wisdom and common sense when we elected Richard Minnich to fill the position of president. He competently led our class meetings and presided over all committee functions.

In the absence of Rich, Bruce Fretz, our vice-president, conducted the meetings. He also gave unsparingly of his time to many class projects, such as choosing a band for the Prom, decorating for various dances, and selecting a Baccalaureate speaker.

Keeping a record of our three senior high years was secretary Barbara Bibbs. She faithfully entered the minutes of each meeting in the class log and took care of all correspondence.

Another veteran on the roll of class officers was Bonnie Shepps, our treasurer. Collecting dues, making deposits and withdrawals, and balancing the class books were just a few of Bonnie's jobs.

Our officers were well-rounded school citizens, for besides serving in their class capacities, they also took part in school functions. All four participated in interscholastic athletics, represented our class in many other school organizations, and proved their merit academically as well.

We revived fond memories . . .

Yearbooks in hand, Miss Rosciola and the Colonel editors head for the Columbia Scholastic Press Conference.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN

In September 1956 the Class of '59 first met as a group. Under the direction of Mr. Fretz and the officers, President Dean Hess, Vice-President Richard Minnich, Secretary Barbara Bibbs, and Treasurer Bonnie Shepps, we determined to establish ourselves as an outstanding class. With yearbook expenses in mind a series of money-making enterprises were launched almost immediately. Sweatshirts and candy proved readily salable commodities, and the first dance, "Teenage Holiday", featuring Johnny Carlton of television fame as emcee was a financial as well as a social success.

Mr. Yeakel and three seniors return from a visit to the Collegeville polls.

TIME MARCHES ON

In our junior year under President Howard Smith and Vice-President Bruce Fretz we successfully carried through a magazine sale, a stellar production of "It Happened at Midnight", the Junior Prom, "Paradise Isle", and even turned a near catastrophe, a snowed-out Valentine's dance, into a successful "Lorelei". The introduction of school instead of the traditional class rings broke a long-established C-T custom.

ONLY YESTERDAY

As seniors we were not unhappy with our record. Members of the Class of '59 consistently stood high on the Honor Roll; our athletes had won fame in league competition; our dramatic production was noteworthy; and as a class we were enthusiastically united under our new president Richard Minnich.

Successes of this, our final year, included a spectacular senior ball "Ice Palace" where the pink, silver, and white decorations evoked a mood of wintery splendor, an "Irish Fling" which captured an aura of the Emerald Isle, and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", a play of the gay twenties.

As graduation announcements made us realize our high school days were almost over, we hoped they had brought honor to the school and to us as individuals.

The cast of our Junior Play, "It Happened At Midnight", poses before curtain time.

A scatter-brained blonde encrusted with diamonds but handicapped by a lack of ready cash becomes involved in questionable money raising schemes, thereby complicating her plans for landing a wealthy young man. Two detectives and a suffragette aunt further hamper her, but ocean breezes and Paris in the spring make her irresistible, thereby proving that "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes".

Authentic costumes, songs of the roaring twenties, and the creative efforts of Mr. Yeakel successfully recaptured the spirit of the Jazz Age. Included in the cast, but not listed below were Edward Scheer, David Bean, Janice Jones, Edna Hoffman, Gail Cassel, Barbara Kutz, Sandra Ziegler, Gary Saylor, George Buck, Alec Clawson, and Douglas Ewing.

Top to bottom:

1. "That must really be the 'Eyeful' Tower, Dorothy."
2. Lorelei scores a ten—a minus ten.
3. Mrs. Spoffard was caught eating the "forbidden fruit".
4. The evidence seems a bit flimsy.
5. Henry successfully pleads his case.
6. Aunt Dolly makes a convert.

We displayed qualities of leadership . . .

1. Basketball players come in handy for dance decorating.
2. The Junior Play, "The Night of January 16th", provides a tense moment.

In September 1957 the Class of 1960 satellite was successfully launched. A year later, September 1958, it was well in orbit with Mr. Palomaki, its new commander, and his assistants, President Bill Shainline, Vice-President Barbara Bacon, Secretary Jane Richards, and Treasurer Jo Ann Rosica at the controls.

Its first project, undertaken for the Curtis Publishing Company on a lucrative contract basis, was to gather all information on magazine subscriptions. This data was compiled and transmitted to the home base by Chief Statistician, Eileen Clement.

As morale builders during the long flight several dances were given. The first, "Colonels' Romp" was to inspire the Colonels to victory over the earth-bound Schwenksville team. A second was the Valentine Dance, "Cupid's Coronation". The Tommy K orchestra provided a heavenly atmosphere for lovely Queen of Hearts Bonnie Shepps and her escort, King of Hearts Ken Landis. The Junior-Senior Prom honored classmates who had nearly completed their journey.

Chief Communications Officer Jabaut established contact with Collegeville and Trappe in order to relay the play "The Night of January 16th" back to earth. The twenty-one crew members participating in the broadcast will assuredly remember the antics performed by the producer during their dress rehearsal.

Since its main objective, shooting the crew into the outer world of life, is still to be achieved, it is expected that the satellite will remain in orbit until June 1960.

Refreshed by a summer away from studies, the sophomores returned in September to find Mr. Miller ready to lead them through their first year as a united class. Realizing that yearbooks and class trips take money, they lost no time in starting to build a nest egg. The first money-making venture, a tremendous paper drive, was followed by the main business project of the year—the traditional sophomore candy sale. This not only proved popular with the students, teachers, and parents, but was very profitable. Barbara Armstrong and Richard Kriebel, ace salesmen, received wristwatches as awards.

Christmas proved particularly festive. Mr. Hartman, 10B advisor, cavorted as Santa Claus, and Miss Tyson and the 10A's entertained members of the faculty at a party. The 10A's were also the proud winners of the newly established contest for window sill Christmas decorations.

In February with Joe Niagara, the popular disc jockey of WIBG spinning platters and acting as Master of Ceremonies, the sophomores and other students were transported to an atmosphere of old New Orleans at the class dance "Mardi Gras". Prizes were awarded for dance contests and futile attempts were made throughout the evening to discover local talent.

The most recently organized class at C-T felt that it had completed a prosperous year, and has already started making plans for even bigger and better activities as juniors and seniors.

1. The sophomores prepare for their gala Mardi Gras.
2. Jack Kane seems to be engrossed in conversation.

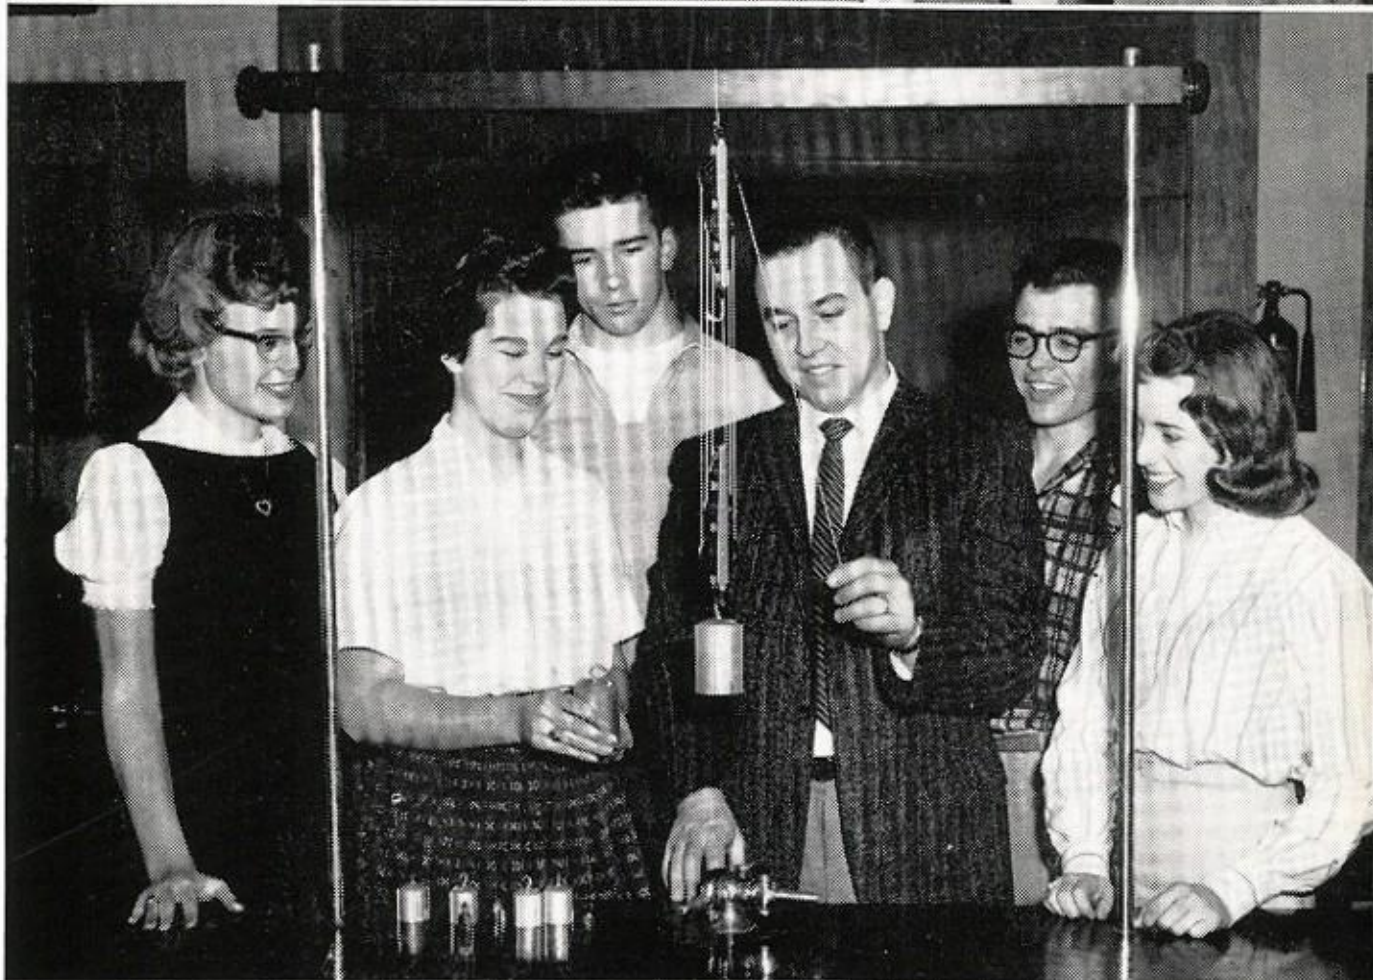

enunciated . . .

Conversation day with its "fractured French" provided some hilarious moments in the 12A French class. None the less, Mrs. de Angeli succeeded in improving the students' accent and grammar. She even managed, aided by Messieurs de Maupassant, Daudet and others, to give a feeling for the language and people—perhaps a bit of "je ne sais quoi".

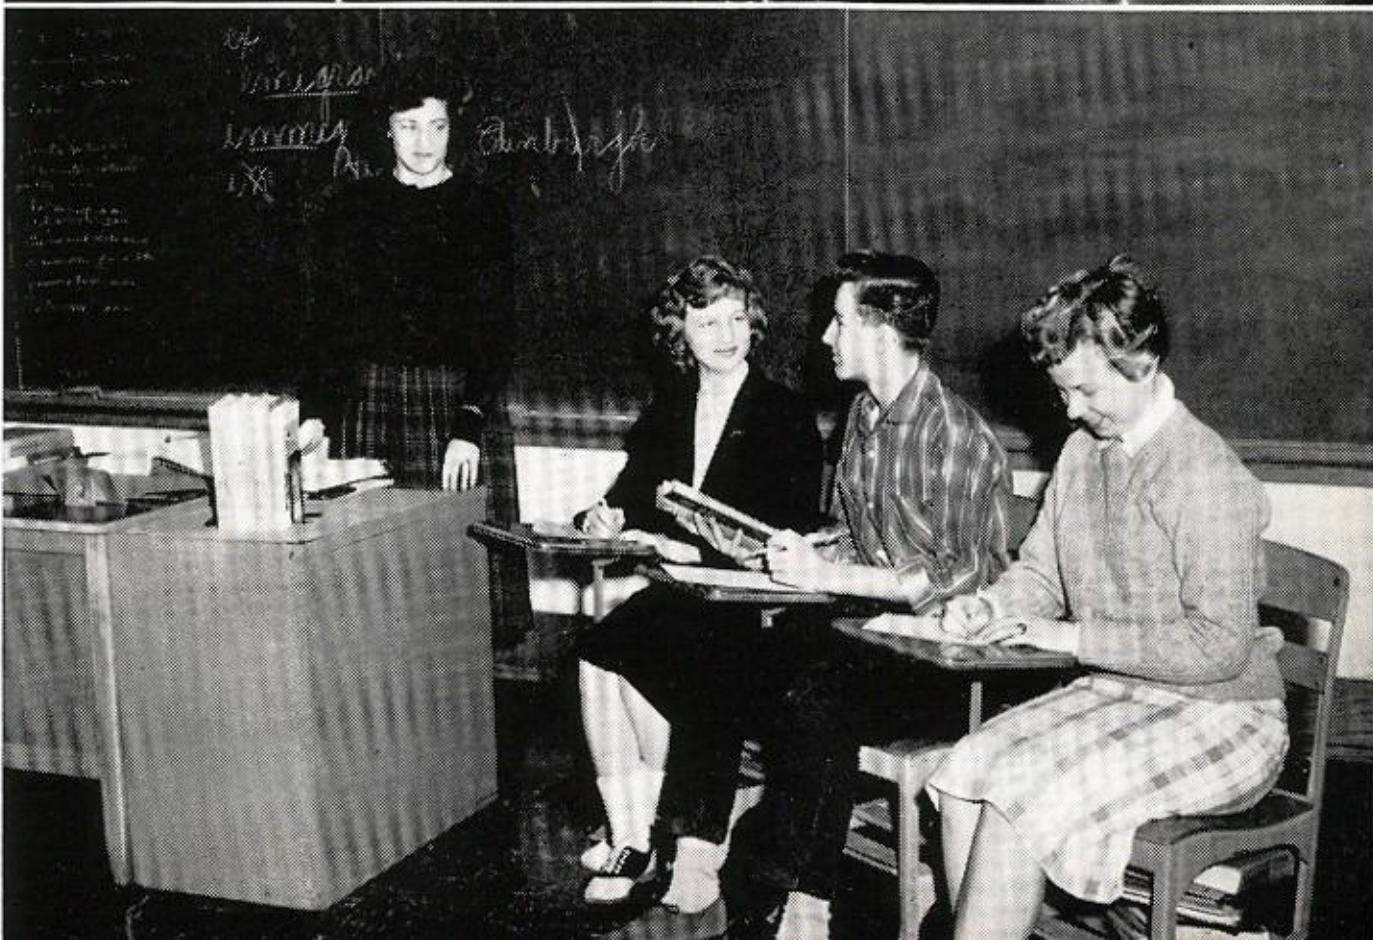

. . . solved . . .

"Ideal mechanical advantage equals resistance divided by effort." This somewhat dry proposition comes to life for the 11A physics class as Mr. Hartman demonstrates the principles behind the construction of a pulley. Through similar experiments and lectures the students learned many of the laws postulated by scientists to explain the forces of the physical world.

. . . and debated.

"A working knowledge of the English language" has been Miss Tyson's goal for the 11B English class. To this end, they studied grammar for proper construction, the works of famous American authors for vocabulary and sense of style, and conducted panel discussions to gain poise and skill in oral expression.

We viewed microbes . . .

Focusing on a paramecium, these 10A biology students discover a fascinating world they never knew existed. Living samples of the various forms of microscopic life provided an added attraction to the course. In investigating the construction of organisms larger than the transparent protozoa, Miss Berger has shown the pupils how to dissect successively higher forms of life: earthworms, starfish, clams, crayfish, and finally, the time honored victim of all biology students, the frog.

No sooner does the bell ring than the typewriters begin clicking. The 10B's are hard at work. Under the expert guidance of their instructor, Miss Major, they are learning correct fingering, accuracy, and speed. Later their course included proper letter forms and the proofreading of manuscripts.

. . . investigated.

"Those are the spark plugs." Thus Mr. Miller follows up his classroom explanation of the workings of an internal combustion engine with an outdoor demonstration. The members of this 11C drivers' education class also learned highway regulations and, at the wheel of the school car, gained valuable experience in safe driving techniques.

We conducted homeroom programs . . .

Now hear this: on embarkation date September 3 we boarded the S. S. Ninth Grade at piers Number 103 and 114 at the Collegeville-Trappe Navy Yard. From there we sailed to many strange lands, going from such ports as Biologia and Mathematica to Latina, and picking up a cargo of facts and skills at each.

While hove-to we sometimes had serious work to do, for example, to hold class meetings and panel discussions on "Good Study Habits". On the other hand we frequently had shore leave which gave us an opportunity to enjoy gay hornpipes, games and parties. Outstanding among these were the November hayride which started from Cooper's stable and ended with cocoa at the Browns', and the December ice-skating party at Winkle's pond which once more finished with hot cocoa, a drink very welcome to chilled tars.

Occasionally parts of the crew put off in small launches for special side trips: Class A Seamen went to the Franklin Institute on Latin Day, and Class B to the Alan Wood Steel Company.

To raise a little "jack", crew members sold Christmas corsages. Two Captains, Miss Hipszer and Mr. Steltz, did their best to keep us on an even keel. They were aided by noncommissioned officers elected from the crew. With such personnel keeping the decks cleared for action and all our crew doing their bit, we sailed successfully to port End-of-the-Year ready for a long shore leave before boarding our new ship S. S. Tenth Grade.

... selected our electives for next year ...

The eighth grade organized for the 1958-59 season on September third. With their general managers Miss Rosciola (8A) and Mrs. Hyatt (8B) coaching from the sidelines they elected their umpires, referees, press agents, and financial managers.

Every Thursday morning at 8:50 the teams met in their respective club houses for games, discussions, and business meetings. The most spectacular home run of the season was scored for the 8A's by their hobby show held in late March. Each player brought an exhibit and gave a short talk about it to the team. Some of the outstanding field plays were shells, first day covers, a group of horse statues, foreign post cards, and cups and saucers. A bonus of one silver dollar was awarded for the best exhibit. Word and subject games, and basketball and dancing in the gym also chalked up high scores for the A's.

The 8B team likewise had a winning season. Discussions on courtesy, the proper and best way to study, panel and spelling games were the strong hits. The winning play, "Blame It on the Movies", brought the cheering fans to their feet.

Both teams competed in two intramural contests sponsored by the Student Council, blackboard decorations for Color Day and window sill displays for Christmas, and both were allowed to break training for their festive Christmas parties.

At the Big Round-up in September 1958, Mr. Edwards roped the largest number of ponies ever stabled on Grade VII Ranch. To insure better handling they were divided into three corrals under experienced cowpunchers Mrs. Pancoast, Mr. Greager, and Mrs. de Angeli. Four lead ponies were chosen for each corral and breaking-in began at once. Corral A, for winning the most Tag Day tickets, was given, as a special ration of oats, an ice cream party. Corral B visited Arnold's ranch for a swim in the pond, and the C's staged lively home room fiestas. Throughout the year the herd was put through its paces in skills required for appearance in the big Rodeo to be held in June 1964.

We declined . . .

"Quousque, tandem, abutere, Catiline, patientia nostra", or "How long do we have to put up with your shenanigans, Catiline?" was but one of the scenes graphically portrayed by the 9A Latin class in their study of Roman history. Other variations from the routine customarily encountered by Latin students were provided by a survey of Roman social life, customs, and mythology. Derivative trees demonstrated the fundamental relationship between Latin and modern languages and increased the students' English vocabulary. Mrs. de Angeli, who refereed the class's regular bouts with declensions and conjugations, saw most of the students emerge victorious.

Though not endowed with the talents of Rembrandt, the 9B art class possesses a hidden desire to create. Mr. Hale has drawn out this trait by giving the students the opportunity to experiment with various media. Here, armed with pen and ink, they are learning the fundamentals of monogramming.

. . . reviewed . . .

Real life drama! Revolution, civil war, Indian massacres, diplomatic intrigue! All this, as well as some of the more humdrum affairs of social and political life, were part of the 8A American history course. Mr. Yeakel, through class reports and a term paper, encouraged independent work by the students.

... probed ...

"Where does the blood enter the heart from the body?" Using this model the eighth grade health class, with Mr. Fretz's help, was able to answer the question. A further study of the circulatory and digestive systems, and an analysis of the body's marvelous recuperative powers gave insight into Emerson's phrase: "The first wealth is health."

... baked ...

"How much sugar, Miss Hipzser?" "Do I stitch it here?" "How does this look?" Questions came thick and fast in the informal atmosphere of the 7C home economics class where cooking, sewing, good grooming, and other requisites of homemaking were studied. Especially enjoyable to the cooking groups was their "adventures in good eating".

... and parsed.

Mark Twain, Thomas Curry, Clarence Day, and other great writers of short stories have become familiar names to the 7B English class. Also, encouraged by Mrs. Pancoast, they have embarked enthusiastically on operation TAB—student purchase of Teen Age Books—an extra-curricular program designed to supplement class book reports and encourage good reading habits.

We balanced in mid-air . . .

Steady now! Balance is important in Mrs. Thomas's eighth grade gym class, and though pyramid building may not be a social asset, it does develop grace and poise. Calisthenics carefully chosen to improve posture, dancing, basketball, and volleyball kept the girls fit during the winter. In the fall and spring, hockey and softball were major activities. And in any season, what could be a better way to end class than with a refreshing shower?

. . . plotted . . .

Plot a point? It's easy for these 7A's, now that Miss Rosciola has introduced them to the mysteries of graphing. They also reviewed basic arithmetic and tackled more advanced problems involving fractions, decimals, and per cents. And note this—they're learning how to manage their money.

. . . located.

Around the world in one hundred eighty days! The 7C geography class, via charts and maps, and with Mr. Greager as tour director, traveled to the four corners of Vanguard I's pear-shaped world. Climate, topography, natural resources, trade, and living standards were studied in the countries visited.

The striking contrasts in color and shading necessary to give the completed picture vividness and interest are provided by the multi-shaped activity pieces.

We compiled our yearbook . . .

It was not always calm in Room 110 while the "Colonel" was being readied for publication. More than once Miss Rosciola sought shelter during wild brain-storming staff meetings, Mr. Sharp withdrew discreetly from turbulent cover selection discussions, and anyone passing Room 110 must on occasion have been shocked at the gory language issuing therefrom—"No, for heaven's sake don't bleed him in the gutter!" (A frazzled editor was protesting in publisher's slang the placement of a picture.)

If they had their troubles, staff members also had their fun—with "reverse write-ups", looking at Denise, our little mascot, and eating the printer's pretzels. They can also make two unusual claims. To our knowledge, no other such group has discovered either "fingerprint dust" (what a picture-clutching person blows off when you tell him "don't touch"), or "verbal chips" (they go flying in the Industrial Arts Society).

In the end Miss Rosciola's constant help, prodding, and technical know-how, the co-operation of teachers and administrators, and the persistent efforts of many staff members brought results. The fact that you are reading this indicates that such difficulties as balky layouts, oversize pictures, and the frustrating problem of getting write-ups to meet an exact word count were overcome. Photographers have hung from plane windows, typists have pounded their keyboards, and staff members have come to know the school in all its moods as they worked long hours to produce what we hope is a memorable yearbook.

The lovely candlelight program at Christmas and the equally beautiful Spring Concert have become two of the most cherished traditions at Collegeville-Trappe High School. Although the Senior Glee Club and Mr. Steltz concentrated their efforts on preparation for these events, they also sang at P. T. A. meetings and school assemblies, and climaxed the year by presenting programs at the baccalaureate and commencement exercises.

"Let's run over that line again, sopranos." Mrs. Scheid knew that teamwork was as essential to group singing as to athletics and that true harmony came only from close cooperation and long practice. The Junior Glee Club's final performances before the student body, the P. T. A., and the newly naturalized American citizens at the courthouse, showed consistently high standards of musical excellence.

... and maintained high standards of conduct.

To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community high standards of Christian character was the aim of the Hi-Y and its sponsor, Mr. Leftwich. The club took an active part in district activities, frequently attended meetings at other high schools, and sent representatives to a weekend conference. They also enjoyed many after-school bowling and swimming parties.

No men allowed! Tri-Hi-Y, inspired by Mrs. Pancoast, was strictly for females—those interested in promoting “high standards of Christian character”. Devoted to service, the girls sponsored a dance for the benefit of World Service and gave food to make someone’s Thanksgiving happier. A true sense of satisfaction was received through mending clothes and toys for the needy. Social activities with the Hi-Y were also enjoyed.

We aroused supporters . . .

"Let's have the Team Yell, the Team Yell, let's go!" cried the cheerleaders, stirring the fans into another rousing demonstration of school spirit. Sponsored by Mr. Palomaki, this effervescent group of eight gave lively leadership to the cheering sections at games and pep rallies. They also proved to be excellent ambassadors to other schools. The projects they undertook included an autumn record hop and the sale of gay yellow mums.

The cheerleaders take time out to pose between halves.

. . . informed readers . . .

A supply of paper, a busy pen, and a keen sense of curiosity were the prerequisites for becoming a reporter for the Red and Gold. The three main departments, news, which covered events of general interest, sports, which reviewed accurately all athletic contests, and features, which presented articles on special subjects, all worked to provide an informative and interesting bi-monthly paper. Mrs. Pancoast, Mr. Palomaki, and Mr. Leftwich were the faculty advisors.

Red and Gold staff members work hard to meet a deadline.

The whistle shrills, four beats of the drum sound, and the C-T band is off. Thirty musicians, six majorettes, and four color guards, smartly uniformed in red and gold, march down the field. At football games intricate drill routines, introduced this year by Mr. Steltz, provided a lively half-time show. The band also added color and pep to rallies, Fun Nite, and assemblies. The Spring Concert, given with the Glee Clubs, concluded a successful year.

... sponsored worthwhile programs ...

"Government of the people, by the people, and for the people" accurately defines the role of the Student Council. Two programs, a dignified induction ceremony and Color Day, impressed upon the students their responsibilities and emphasized school loyalty. Through other activities, the Council members and Mr. Yeakel helped maintain a sympathetic understanding between faculty and students and a keen interest in school affairs.

Brains as well as brawn were characteristic of the Athletic Association. Membership was limited to the captains of their respective teams, who, with the faculty advisors and Mr. Edwards, planned and financed the sports activities of the school. Proceeds from various projects such as Tag Day and the Student-Faculty game were invested in smart, safe athletic dress and improvement of the sports program.

... and patrolled the halls.

"Man your posts, boys! Here they come!" Daily at the sound of the bell an avalanche of humanity poured into the halls, but the alert patrolmen with smooth efficiency soon had traffic moving in orderly lanes. Carefully trained by Miss Tyson, the Senior High Hall Patrol and Table Captains showed that students were able to command the respect of their peers.

It's sheer survival of the fittest—or would be, without the Junior High Hall Patrol's on-the-spot direction of the heavy traffic which follows the first lunch period. The cafeteria table captains also did their share of police work by dismissing the students after making sure no signs of the noontime feast remained. Both squads, commanded by Miss Berger, consisted entirely of freshman.

"Who would ever want to teach?" queries a pupil who sometimes makes his instructors wonder why they chose the profession. Nevertheless, the most recently formed club at C-T is an active group whose ambition is just that. In their first year, they have become a properly chartered Future Teachers of America Club, and, with their advisor, Miss Tyson, have attended an inter-county conference.

A Shutterbug is a peculiar insect. It has a small dark protuberance containing a translucent substance known as celluloid. The Shutterbug approaches its prey cautiously, and, after considerable maneuvering has assured it that its position is exactly right, utters a sharp clicking sound. Strangely enough it makes no effort to consume its victim. Mr. Greager's collection of these strange insects is called the Camera Club.

For FUN dial the Senior High Boys' Activities Club. Here gamesmanship was developed into a fine art as the members matched wits with each other or with Mr. Jabaut in a great variety of card games and novelty tests of skill. Patience, persistence, quickness of perception, and accuracy of observation may have been by-products, but basically "the game was the thing".

"Checkmate", "king me", and "three no trump" were some of the notable expressions overheard in Mrs. de Angeli's Junior High Activities Club. Using logic and reasoning, absolutely essential in such games as chess, checkers, and bridge, these students created competition which was keen as well as stimulating to their minds. But despite the fact that rivalry often reigned, the members remained friends.

We manufactured rocket fuel . . .

No alchemists of old could have been more anxious to transmit baser metals into gold than the Senior High Chemistry Club was to discover a new and better propulsion energy. As victims of the world-wide zeal for space travel, they spent many Monday club periods producing, and, with Mr. Hartman's help, testing different types of rocket fuel. (P.S. No rockets were sent into orbit.)

"Bubble, bubble, toil and trouble"—to make sure that the Junior High Chemistry Club did not turn the laboratory into a witches' caldron, Mrs. Hyatt began the year by emphasizing safety precautions. Films and simple experiments such as treating sugar with concentrated sulfuric acid were then used to acquaint club members with some of the elementary principles of chemistry.

The pitcher winds up, heaves the ball, and, with a mighty swing, the batter fans the air as the sphere lands neatly in the catcher's mitt. To avoid incidents like this, C-T's future big leaguers, the Boys' Sports Club, worked patiently to improve their skill at the plate. Mr. Fretz also trained them in other sports appropriate to the seasons: football, wrestling, boxing, basketball, and volleyball.

Girls with lots of pep and energy who wished to enjoy their favorite sports or to improve their athletic skills turned naturally to Mrs. Thomas and the Girls' Sports Club. This year, in addition to playing hockey, softball, soccer, basketball, and volleyball, a beginners' course in archery was completed. Rules were studied and techniques improved, but the major emphasis was recreation.

There seem to be quite a few overdue books.

... signed out books ...

"Bookworms are our business" might be the sign posted on the Library Club's bulletin board. Members of this group served both before and after school as librarians, and kept library affairs in good order by cleaning shelves, repairing books, and maintaining records. With Mr. Yeakel's assistance, they helped the other students find material for assigned work or leisure reading and presided over the mad rush at book report time.

... concocted delicacies ...

Women may prepare meals, but the world's greatest chefs are men—at least that's the opinion of the Boys' Homemaking Club and they're out to prove it (although they still need Miss Hipszer's help in the culinary experiments!). Homemaking includes much more than cooking, however, so such necessary skills as sewing on buttons, ironing shirts, and pressing pants were also mastered. To aid the boys in job interviews Mr. Albert Zvarick spoke on manners and dress.

The penalty for splattering up the kitchen is paid.

R. N.—Registered Nurse. Many a young girl dreams of having those initials behind her name, but some C-T girls are not just vaguely wishing, they're planning ahead now. Because of their interest, the emphasis of Mrs. Wagner's Home Nursing Club shifted this year from amateur to professional nursing, although the procedures they learned could be applied to both. To investigate the field, a trip to a Philadelphia hospital was taken in May.

We developed manual dexterity . . .

With hammers, saws, and tin-snips, the members of the Crafts Club turned out a unique collection of useful articles: cutting boards, leaf shelves, and arrow racks. Besides mastering such basic techniques as metal stippling, they experimented with novel methods of their own. Whatever the hobby, Mr. Thompson was able to provide the expert guidance and materials necessary to complete the project.

An octopus is not a strange sea creature but is, as any member of the Needlework Club can tell you, an ornament for a girl's room. This year octopi of many colors were produced by the group. Also, with patience and nimble fingers, the girls, "needled" by Miss Rosciola, threaded their way through the intricacies of embroidery, knitting, and crocheting.

"Into the wild blue yonder" went the Aviation Club members in spirit if not in body. Since flying held a great fascination for them, they spent their club periods watching films on aviation, working with model planes, discussing the technical problems of their hobby with Mr. Miller, and perhaps dreaming of the day when they would actually be in the cockpit.

... pounded the keys ...

At any session of the Typing Club, Mr. Palomaki could observe several distinct kinds of individuals. There was the mechanic investigating the machine's internal workings, the student making his homework neat and presentable, the artist using the letters to create a design, and the embryo secretary striving for speed and precision. Each student improved his typing skill after his own fashion.

Chips went flying, both verbal and wooden, when the Industrial Arts Society, sponsored by Mr. Thompson, held its meetings. Since the requirement for membership was an average grade of ninety or more in shop, these boys were not mere "do-it-yourself-ers". They had already acquired considerable skill and by the end of the year were nearly professional in some fields.

The art world has a language of its own: depth perception, perspective, dimension, shading, and shadows. By spring the words rolled glibly from the tongue of even the youngest Art Club student. What's more, they understood them! Mr. Hale made sure of that. He also served as critic when, brush in hand, palette grasped in paint-smudged fist, each apprentice strove to become a creative artist.

Fifteen assemblies designed to enthuse, entertain, and educate us were presented during the year. Of these, Uncle Sam provided two: a judo exhibition given by the Navy, and a concert by the Fourth Naval District Band. Other musical presentations included the Ursinus College Meistersingers, a "Cavalcade of Music" by three professional artists, and a Christmas concert by our own Glee Clubs. At Thanksgiving Rabbi Kamsler of Norristown, and at Easter Dr. Hudson of the Baptist Church conducted special services. Other outstanding programs were a demonstration of liquid air, a play by the Baille Theater, and several assemblies centered around school affairs. These ranged from boisterous pre-game pep rallies to the dignified Student Council Induction, and the annual awards and yearbook dedication programs.

We ground out yardage . . .

In mid-August fifty-two enthusiastic football candidates reported to Coach Fretz and his assistants, Mr. Hilt and Mr. Greager. Inspired by last year's undefeated season the squad buckled down to grueling pre-season practice. By the time school opened they were in top physical condition and determined to defend successfully their Inter-County League Championship.

The first test came when C-T played host to a powerful Wyomissing eleven. The Colonels led at half-time 13-0, but in the second half were unable to stem a strong comeback by the opponents who won by a 14-13 score.

Despite this early defeat the team was not to be denied a successful season. After an impressive victory over Jenkintown, they met Bridgeport, a newcomer in the League at Roosevelt Field in Norristown, and won a decisive free-scoring game. Following consecutive victories over Pottsgrove, Exeter, and Upper Dublin, the Colonels faced Lower Moreland, the only undefeated team in the league. Determined to win, they trounced Lower Moreland to go into a tie for first place.

The final contest, a one-sided victory over neighboring Schwenksville, gave the Colonels a 7-1 record and a Tri-Championship with Lower Moreland and Wyomissing.

VARSITY HOCKEY

Whack! It was only August—the opening of school was two weeks away—but for thirty-five girls hockey practice had begun. Coach Thomas kept the squad to a rugged schedule; three laps around the field, calisthenics, scrimmage, and constant drill in scooping, flicking, dribbling and driving.

On October sixth the season opened. The girls fought hard but their stronger opponents swept to a 2-1 victory. Scorewise the remaining games were also disappointing, but the enthusiasm of the girls and their good sportsmanship were a credit to the school.

The annual banquet was held at the Kopper Kettle in November. Mrs. Thomas, to show her appreciation of the team spirit, gave each girl a red carnation. Especially honored were the seniors, Captain Connie Corson, Barbara Bibbs, Karen Haitz, and Judy Miller.

JUNIOR VARSITY HOCKEY

The J. V.'s, like the varsity, reported to practice in late August, and joined in the same rigorous daily routine. Since most of the girls were novices in the game and faced their opponents armed mainly with enthusiasm, goals scored were few. But with the experience and training acquired this year, they should provide good varsity material for the future.

... drove for the basket ...

The 1958-59 Colonel basketball team under their new head coach, George Hilt, compiled one of the most impressive records of recent years—eleven wins, five losses. Although defeated by Bridgeport by a slim one point margin in their first league game, they staged a successful comeback by downing successively Jenkintown, Lower Moreland, Schwenksville, and Pottsgrove, losing only to Upper Dublin.

The second half of the series opened with a revenge victory over the Bridgeport Dragons, but as a result of losing the next two out of five games the Colonels dropped to third place in the League. They then capped the season by defeating the faculty in a completely hilarious game.

Noteworthy this year was the Colonels well-rounded attack, indicated by the fact that each of the starting five players scored over 100 points in league competition.

... passed across the court ...

Increasing interest in girls' sports was shown this year by a record turnout of seventy candidates for the basketball team. Paring down the number to twenty was a difficult task for Mrs. Thomas and the co-captains.

As a result of a rather pointed Tag Day assembly, the girls at last secured new uniforms and were freed from bulky sleeves and strangling collars. White blouses and shorts, trimmed in red and accented by gold buttons, kept the girls neatly turned out.

The game with Schwenksville was the best played and most exciting. With the lead alternating throughout the game, time ran out at a moment when C-T was two goals behind. Although the girls did not hold the upper hand, the experience gained was invaluable and a wonderful feeling of friendliness and sportsmanship surrounded every game.

Graduating this year will be Co-Captains Betty Heebner and Sandy Shupe, players Connie Corson, Barbara Kutz, Kitty Sullivan, Bonnie Shepps, and managers Henrietta Wagner and Judy Miller.

The Colonels' 1958 baseball team was sparked by Coach Fretz to a 5-1 record in league competition. This gave them the undisputed championship. The overall season play, which chalked up nine victories and only two losses, was impressive. The 1959 team, with a nucleus of veteran players, is looking forward to an equally successful season in the newly established Inter-County League.

and fielded the ball.

When the 1958 softball squad began practice in early April they faced the season with high hopes. Coached by Mrs. Thomas, an enthusiastic ten began to shape up. Although defeated in the first game, they soon recovered confidence by trouncing Schwenksville 34-3. The season ended with three wins, three losses—a taste of the bitter and the sweet that combined to form an exciting season.

Farewell

As we say good-bye, we are conscious that our days here have been happy and satisfying. If some few tasks seemed irrelevant, we now realize that, like the pieces of our puzzle, each was essential training for adult life. To those who have endured, guided, and inspired us, we offer our deepest gratitude. Finally, with each piece fitted smoothly into place, we especially thank those who have helped so generously to complete the 1959 Colonel.
